

Parergon

Vol. 32, No. 2 (2015, Published 2016)

Religion, Memory and Civil War in the British Isles

Essays for Don Kennedy

Contents

Parergon Editor's Foreword	vii
Articles
Religion, Memory and Civil War in the British Isles Dolly MacKinnon, AlexandraWalsham and AmandaWhiting	1
Holy Violence and the English Civil War Donald E. Kennedy	17
"Charles Stuart, that man of blood" Patricia Crawford	43
Phanaticus: Hugh Peter, Antipuritanism and the Afterlife of the English Revolution AlexandraWalsham	65
Surviving the Cavalier Winter: The Experience of Richard and Ann Fanshawe Geoffrey Smith	99
Richly Blessed or Sorely Tested? Religious Belief and Association in Early Stuart England: The Case of James Whitelocke Damian Powell	123
Sir Dudley Carleton and Sir Thomas Roe: English Servants of the Queen of Bohemia and the Protestant International during the Thirty Years War John Reeve	151
Blackstone as Historian Wilfrid Prest	183
'Correcting an Error in history': Battlefield Memorials at Marston Moor and Naseby Dolly MacKinnon	205
Notes on Contributors	237